RESEARCH ABSTRACT GUIDELINES

The following points serve only as general guidelines. Research Abstract must be in English (if in another language, ensure a translated version is available). An abstract is a single paragraph, without indentation, that summarizes the key points of the manuscript in 150 to 400 words. The whole paragraph covers the Introduction, Methods, Results and Discussions.

Introduction	25% of the space on importance of research	Begin by explaining to your readers what problem you researched and why the research is necessary. Convince readers that it is important that they continue to read. Discuss the current state of research in your field, expose a “gap” or problem in the field, and then explain why your present research is a timely and necessary solution to that gap.
Methods	25% of the space on what you did	Methods are usually written in past tense and passive voice with lots of headings and subheadings. This is the least-read section of an IMRaD report.
Results	35% of the space on what you found: this is the most important part of the abstract	Results are where the findings and outcomes of the research go. When talking about this data, we can think of the results as having two parts: report and comment. The reporting function always appears in the results section while the comment function can go in the discussion section. Make sure all tables and figures are labelled and numbered separately. Captions go above tables and beneath figures.
Discussion	15% of the space on the implications of the research	Discussion sections contain the following moves: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. They summarize the main findings of the study. This allows readers to skip to the beginning of the discussion section and understand the main “news” in the report.</li> <li>2. They connect these findings to other research</li> <li>3. They discuss flaws in the current study.</li> <li>4. They use these flaws as reasons to suggest additional, future research.</li> <li>5. (If needed) They state the implications of their findings for future policy or practice.</li> </ol>
